About Kuchipudi

Kuchipudi derives its name after its village of birth in Andhra Pradesh, India. Sri Siddhendra Yogi, the father of this dance form, first developed this particular style in the 14th century. He is known for Bhamakalapam, a ballet, which was performed over nine days and was based on the mythological story of Satyabhama and Lord Krishna.

Kuchipudi evolved from yakshagana, a drama tradition practiced by male dancers who played both male and female roles to enact stories. As the patronage changed through each generation, this art form grew and went through a lot of changes.

In the early part of the 20th century, Sri Vendantam Lakshmi Narayana Sastry revolutionized Kuchipudi by introducing solos to the drama tradition. He also encouraged women into the art form. His disciple, Padmabhushan Dr. Vempati Chinna Satyam continued his work and brought world-wide recognition to this art form.

The foundations of Kuchipudi are based on the Natya Shastra, a treatise on dance, music, and drama. This art form is characterized by its scintillating rhythm, quicksilver movements, geometric precision, eloquent and sensitive expressions, and beauty in its technique of presentation.

More than that, Kuchipudi is a lifestyle to live, a discipline to follow that makes one a better person.

About the Gurus

Smt. J. Sarada was introduced to dance by Smt. Shantha Balagopalan in Dhanbad, India. In 1985, she began learning Kuchipudi under Padmabhushan Dr. Vempati Chinna Satyam at the Kuchipudi Art Academy in the true gurukulam style, living in his home. In 1987, she moved to Kuchipudi Kalakshetra, Visakhapatnam, a branch of the Academy. In 2000, she spent a whole year honing her proficiency in expressions, choreography, and theory at Kuchipudi

Kalakshetra. Sarada has performed and given lecture demonstrations in the United States, Singapore and India.

A prolific choreographer, Sarada has choreographed Kuchipudi dance items that feature complex rhythms and nuanced expressions and explore philosophical themes in Hinduism.

Sarada is the founder and director of Sri Sai Dance Academy. She began teaching in Richmond in 2002. During the nineties, Sarada taught Kuchipudi at the Nrithyalaya Aesthetics Society and taught dance under the Singapore Ministry of Education. From 2000 to 2001, she taught Kuchipudi in Visakhapatnam as part of Kuchipudi Kalakshetra's outreach.

Kum. Ameya Jammii, also taught Sathya in her preparation for her rangapravesam. Ameya began learning Kuchipudi at the Kuchipudi Kalakshetra in 2000. Since then, Ameya has been under the tutelage of her mother, J. Sarada. She has also underwent training under Sri Hari Rama Murthy and Smt. N. N. V. Satyabhanu.

Sri Hari Rama Murthy, principal of Kuchipudi Kalakshetra, and Smt. N. N. V. Satyabhanu, director of Sri Siddhendra Yogi Kala Nilayam conducted workshops that Sathya attended. She also trained under them as a cast member of Mohini Bhasmasura during the summer of 2011.

About the School

Sri Sai Dance Academy was established by Smt. J. Sarada. Based in Henrico, Va., it is an institution dedicated to learning, understanding, and fostering interest in the classical art form of Kuchipudi that was born out of Sarada's love for teaching. A patient and dedicated teacher with over two decades of teaching experience, Sarada focuses on developing technical perfection, theoretical understanding and, most importantly, passion for the art form.

The dynamic class environment allows for both individual attention and learning in groups. Additionally, the class's informal mentorship system allows students to hone their own skills and learn from each other, as well as forge strong relationships.

Rangapravesam, which means "ascending the stage" in Sanskrit, is a full-length solo dance performance. It marks the transition of the artist from a student to a blossoming dancer. Accompanied by a live orchestra, this performance demands that the dancer exhibit an understanding of the many aspects of Kuchipudi, from sensitive expressions to intricate rhythm, blending grace and vigor.

About the Artiste

Kum. Sathya Areti is a junior at Henrico High School in the International Baccalaureate program. She has learned Kuchipudi under Smt. J. Sarada for over eight years. In addition to training at Sri Sai Dance Academy, she has also attended workshops conducted by Sri Hari Rama Murthy and Smt. N. N. V. Satyabhanu in Richmond, Va.

Sathya has performed at the Sai Temple and for various cultural programs in the Richmond area, as well as in the 2002 Siddhendra Aradhana at the Siva Vishnu Temple, Maryland. She also performed in Sri Hari Rama Murthy's 2011 US tour presenting the dance drama Mohini Bhaskasura.
